

Fall Preview NEW YORK

FEATURING:
Quentin Tarantino p. 30
& Samuel L. Jackson p. 30

Back in the Saddle (with Jesse Plemons)
With The Hateful Eight

PLUS:
Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Everywhere
Michael Fassbender, Tor

Rob Lowe, Ditto
Kate Winslet, Steve Jobs's Requiem

April Bloomfield's New Burger Joint

The Return of Crimes ...

... and Duran Duran ...

... and New Order ...

... and Keith Richards

(who's just glad to be alive)

The Planet: Keira Knightley, Bruce Willis, and Lupita Nyong'o

Martian: Matt Damon

Picasso, Frank Stella, Olga Schutz

And more ...

AND:
Christian Lorenson on Jonathan Franzen's New Torso

+
What Our Critics Are Really Looking Forward To

ALSO
Who Shall Inherit the Times? p. 30

The Slender Man Stabbing p. 39

Gabriel Sherman on Trump's Long Game p. 41

DECONSTRUCTION

Toto

10 W. 22nd St.

Toto's new Carlyle II 1G toilet with C100 washlet ($1,493) will be available at its forthcoming showroom (December).

SIDE BY SIDE

Two new instant-makeover salons, one uptown, one down.

M.A.C Studio
825 Lexington Ave.
soft-opened in July,
grand opening in September

Joli Beauty Bar
44 E. 1st St.
September

SETUP

Six makeover chairs in the front room have attached iPads featuring looks like "neutral face with winged liner and bold bright lips"; two back rooms are for cosmetics and VIP clients.

Six chairs in a 400-square-foot room decorated with subway tiles reminiscent of Paris Métro stations, one private-party room, and a changing area with storage lockers.

Porcelanosa

A Spanish transplant, this fancy kitchen-and-bath showroom features an interactive wall with life-size images of its porcelain tiles and brushed-wood laminate flooring—plus a café, bar, library, and rooftop. 202 Fifth Ave.

eye masks ($25), makeovers (from $60), extensions ($150), all come with a glass of espresso.

artists will use to find brands like Cosmetics, which are on eventually in-store.

British details—vegetable-tanned leather straps, brushed-metal beads, round faces with Roman numerals—of these Swiss-made watches (priced around $350). The first Stateside store will also offer free coffee from South London's Alchemy. 335 Bleecker St.

Bloomingdale's The Outlet Store
Expect "all the usual players" at Manhattan's first-ever Bloominie's outlet, says company senior vice-president Michelle Benoit: a robust denim section with brands like Prigé, busies from Vince, and Converse sneakers, all for as much as 70 percent off the department store's prices, with new deliveries coming in every few days. 2085 Broadway

Lowe's
The home-improvement chain debuts in Manhattan with two smaller-scale (but still 80,000-square-foot) stores on the Upper West Side and in Chelsea. In addition to the appliances and storage products, there are throw pillows, vases, and other décor curated by New York interior designer Nicole Gibbons. Apartment-friendly vignettes include one kitchen setup that squeezes a dishwasher, stove, and cooking unit in an eight-foot counter-top. 3008 Broadway and 635-641 Sixth Ave.

Tory Sport
Ahead of a stand-alone storefront expected in March, this pop-up version inside Tory Burch's original boutique is a Royal Tenenbaums take on athleisure, with navy-and-red L'pern leggings ($125) and tennis sweaters made in breathable cotton ($195). 257 Elizabeth St.

Givenchy
Following a seven-year absence, the brand helmed by Riccardo Tisci returns to New York with a zebra-print-accented, 4,500-square-foot Upper East Side flagship and the launch of its first-ever denim collection. 747 Madison Ave.

Porcelanosa
A Spanish transplant, this fancy kitchen-and-bath showroom features an interactive wall with life-size images of its porcelain tiles and brushed-wood laminate flooring—plus a café, bar, library, and rooftop. 202 Fifth Ave.

Dylan's Candy Bar
Think of it as a nightclub version of the original Dylan's—shty black

Artists & Revolutionaries
Based in the Hudson Valley, this ecofriendly womenswear label will offer linen jumpers ($198), abtorti-dyed dresses ($368), and recycled-leather belts ($148) in a cabinlike space. 220 Thompson St.

Cire Trudon
After closing its Bond Street location a few years ago, the Parisian candle shop returns with burgundy lacquered furniture, antique mirrors, leather-and-glazed-chestnut-scented natural wax candles (from $65), and kitschy wax busts. 248 Elizabeth St.

Larsson & Jennings
Net-a-Porter shoppers may recognize the very